Outlook on Windows generally uses MAPI over HTTP, perhaps the nearest thing to a native Exchange protocol.. In the past this was sometimes called Hx but it seems now to go by the name Microsoft Sync.. Microsoft has plugged some key gaps in its 'new Outlook' for macOS, currently in preview and given a fresh update just a few days ago, but the product still has puzzling omissions that drive users back to the old version.. When Microsoft acquired Accompli in 2014, whose product became Outlook Mobile, it used its own protocol but that too now uses Microsoft Sync.. VBA has never come to Outlook on the Mac, but a 2014 release was much improved, as Microsoft began to push the idea of Office 365 everywhere rather than keeping users hooked on Windows.. The history of Outlook on the Mac is inglorious Microsoft and Mac go back a long way.. When it came to Outlook though, Mac users lost out Outlook on Windows goes back to 1997, but the first full Mac version did not appear until Outlook 2011, and even that was not very good, slower than the Windows version and missing some features, such as Visual Basic for Applications (VBA).. Microsoft is not happy with either and for its 'modern' mail client in Windows 8 and Windows 10 it developed a new sync protocol. ae05505a44 Driver Zogis Real Angel 400U Pro
