however seen before in any sport. Fight Night Champion is the first game that replicates the feeling of a real fight. Game Modes The main game mode is Arcade Mode, where the player can play in one of six environments, pick a fighter, and fight against a number of opponents. The various environments are Battlezone, Burnout, Cutthroat, Evolve, Trap House, and Iceberg.

Fight Night Champion's Arcade Mode has an unique set of features that have never before been seen in a boxing game. Most boxing games feature five-round matches, with each round consisting of multiple rounds. Arcade Mode uses eight-round fights with no round divisions. It is also the only boxing game to feature only two rounds per fight. Unlike most boxing games, fighters have four attributes that are displayed in each round. A fighter's strength, stamina, agility, and health points, along with a blue score box, are displayed along the right side of the screen. These four attributes can be combined into three different categories: aggression, defense, and attack. Furthermore, Fight Night Champion's round-based gameplay is played in 15-minute matches rather than the traditional three-minute rounds. A fighter can win rounds by getting the other fighter into a submission or knocking him out. If a fighter is knocked down once, he must remain on the ground for three minutes. If a fighter can not be knocked down three times in a row, the match ends in a draw. If a fighter loses three times in a row, he is eliminated from the match. For the record, fifteen minute fights can result in longer fights than the traditional three-minute fight, due to fatigue.

This can lead to drawn out matches where the first fighter to gain a knockout advantage is able to continue fighting for longer than the match allotted. This is due to the added vitality of each round that can be used to keep the fighter from being knocked out multiple times in a row. A 15-minute fight will only last as long as both fighters' total vitality is not above one-third of the total fight time. The time is then added to the round's end time. Fighters in Fight Night Champion are real people and use real boxers' names and pictures, as well as moves inspired by real-life boxers and the history of boxing. Additionally, the programming and design team personally researched and recruited boxing pros to play on Fight Night Champion. The people chosen by the developers were carefully chosen for 82157476af
